Your Club Room

Meet Your Friends Here for That Next Friendly Game of Billiards

Billiards is the greatest national indoor sport and exercise, and is participated in today by more men and young men than any other game.

My billiard room is a club room for men and young men. Your membership in this club is based upon your good behavior entirely, not upon the amount of money you spend.

I try to make conditions such that everyone will feel welcome in this clean, light, airy and well regulated room with pocket billiard tables always kept in best condition, with best material. With your co-operation in keeping this place to the high moral standard I would have, I believe you will feel proud of your club room and cause outsiders that there are much worse places in which they may spend their spare moments.

Double Tragedy at Kennett.

Being despondent over the condition of his health and in some way jealous of his wife, And Jones, a painter and paper hanger of Kennett, shot his wife five times last week and shortly afterwards killed himself. Any four of the worst wounds inflicted on his wife would have been fatal and she lived but a short time, his own death was instantaneous, the shot taking effect in the right temple.

Jones also shot Mrs. M. A. King, the landlady at the boarding house where he and Mrs. Jones had been staying, claiming that she had interfered between him and his wife. Her wound was not a very dangerous one, however, and she will recover.

Jones had been out of work for some time and was afflicted with tuberculosis and very despondent over his condition. He was in Caruthersville a few days before the shooting took place and pawned a ring here to Cass Blair for money to take him home to Kennett. He sent money to redeem the ring before committing the tragedy and directed that it should be sent to his mother, who lives at Bloomfield.

Persons who knew the family claim that Jones had no cause to blame his wife at all and believe that he must have been mentally deranged owing to his long illness.—Caruthersville Democrat.

The Falstaff flavor is a development of three-quarters of a century brewing experience.

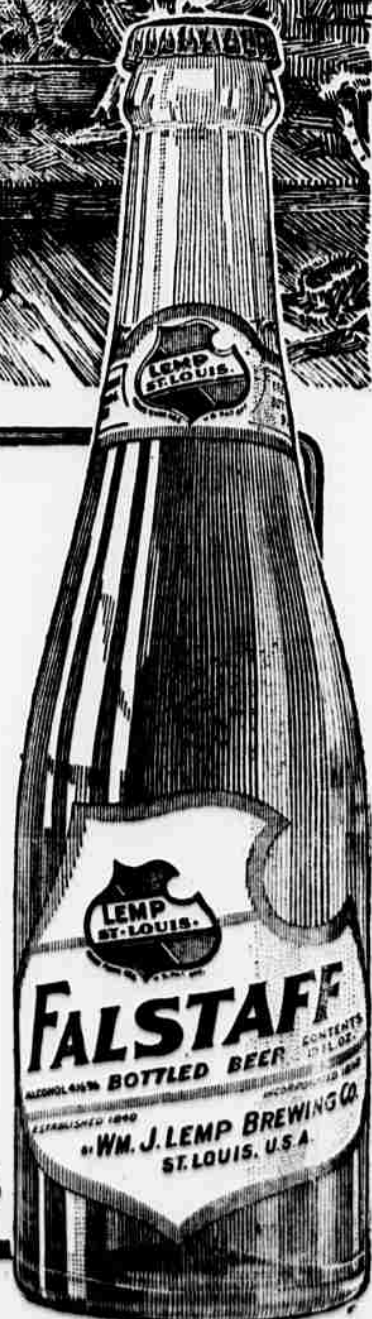

FALSTAFF
"The choicest product of the brewer's art"

is entirely original in flavor, brilliant in color, perfect in quality. It strikes a happy medium between the dark and extra pale beers; and is a deluxe edition of the best in each.

Falstaff is always the same Falstaff, wherever or whenever you buy it—for Lemp controls its making from the choosing of the grain to the bottling of the finished brew.

Beer is a food. Bread and beer are made of the same materials: cereal, yeast and water. Bread is solid; beer is liquid—both are highly nourishing. Physicians prescribe beer to produce energy, build tissue and strengthen nerves.
